

Update on Journal OCR Committee:

Previously reported:

As a reminder, the actual OCR process is complete through 1996 (the project end date). This means that every article from the beginning through and including 1996 has been turned into a raw .txt file. Completed, and online Journals extend through 1981.

Update:

Since November, I have submitted three additional completed Journals to Scott Doyle from 1982 and 1983. The proof-readers have continued to work diligently in the proofing process. One proofer of particular note in the last six months is Richard Hitchcox. He has been a huge help in this aspect of the process as he has turned in eight Journals by himself. The next part of the process for the remaining Journals prior to submission to Scott Doyle deals with scanning of images. Lynette Kogler has been of a huge value to the project in that she has been able to scan images even prior to proofers returning the text.

Some proofers have not returned Journals in a long time after repeated requests. These Journals will be re-assigned to other proofers.

Again, all Journals have been OCR'ed. The following table shows what Journals have been returned after proofing, as well as which Journals have images scanned.

I am always looking for volunteers for this project. As we near the end, I am in greatest need of people with original Journals from 1982 on with experience in scanning images. New fresh proofers would also help me make up for those that have not turned in recent Journals assigned.
